

Reflection 12

20 pts - This weeks topic is important for teamwork because loyalty to ones team to an extent is what makes it work. In a computer science workplace it takes a while to come to speed on a work with a new team in a new workplace and so quitting and hiring cant happen so often. Loyalty to a company and team will keep the existing teams in the company working at a high level because of the amount of time they have between them.

20 pts - I can relate company loyalty to the gospel by saying that in the church it is not at all encouraged to follow other gods. You have to stay loyal to the god that you know is true and any attempt to praise any other god would be blasphemous. It offends god to look for other gods and it offends your employer to look for other jobs for no reason.

10 pts - A SMART goal for next week would be that I want to find 20 minutes to just sit down and play a game.

10 pts - Something that I want to do differently next week is that I want to be productive when ever i decide that I should be.

20 pts - I taught my friend Austin about company loyalty and he though it was interesting how computer science workers are rewarded for being unloyal to their company, quickly jumping salaries.

20 pts - This relates to an experience I had with my employer Taco Bell in Texas when I quit two times and got rehired once. I wanted another go over the summer before coming here to get a little bit of extra money but I couldn't be hired again because I quit two times. That taught me that I should stay with companies for longer to get rewarded.
